One of the injunctions contained in at 1 o'clock this morning, when all the fering from small-pox.

The Active to the Source of th which had been licensed to keep open all night, if there are any such in the precinct.

Cant. Schmittberger delivered a long lecture to the 6 o'clock and midnight platoons, and it is said that among other things which he enjoined them to look out for was gambling houses or other supplicious places.

In the Twentieth, and in fact all other precincts, the same edict as regards the closing of saloons was sent forth, but it was the more noticeable in the Nineteenth and Twentieth, because heretofore the saloons have done business at all hours of the day and night with but the smallest semblance of secrecy.

The oxciso laws must be rigidly enforced hereafter, according to the Superintendent's orders, else the captain of the precinct in which any violation is discovered will be summarily called to account by the Superintendent, who has full power to act under a recent resolution of the Police Commissioners.

It is also said that Central Office detectives were scattered all over the city last night taking notes and making observations. This could not be except by Supt. Byrnes's directions. The object undoubtedly must have been to make observations for the benefit of the superintendent as to how faithfully his orders were executed by the captains.

Supt. Byrnes refused to discuss the matter to-day or even affirm or deny whether the saloon and gambling-house order was to be of general application or what further instructions, if any, he saye the captain yesterday. or what further instructions, if any, he save the captains vesterdey.

As a result of the police vigilance, only two excise arrests were made in the Tenderloin District last night. They were Edward Nail, of 481 Sixth avenue, and Joseph Sheim, bartender for Michael Minden, of 500 Sixth avenue. There was no evidence produced in court to show that they were doing business after hours, and Justice McMahon discharged them.
